Morocco, Kingdom of Golf

Golf is both an art of living and an art of travelling – all the more so in Morocco, where it becomes a subtle blend of elegance, good companionship and relaxation. Twenty-two clubs now exist in the Kingdom, each in its own magical setting, with further courses in the pipeline as part of the Kingdom’s Azur Resorts Plan.

Morocco is a land of varied landscapes, flora and climate, and it will come as no surprise that each club has its own personality, its own unique architecture. Whether you’re a beginner or an old pro, you’ll be sure to find a course to your taste, with personalised services tailored to your needs.

Some courses have become the stuff of legend. In Marrakech, for example, you’ll be playing in the footsteps of Churchill, and in Rabat, in those of Payne Stewart, Colin Montgomerie and Santiago Luna, all winners of the highly prestigious Hassan II Trophy. Elsewhere, in Agadir or El Jadida, you’ll be playing in a holiday atmosphere, just a swing away from the magnificent beaches that adorn the Kingdom’s Atlantic coastline.

Every course, without exception, combines sumptuous scenery, top-quality service, and pleasant climatic conditions all year round. Whether you’re golfing by the sea or in a mountain valley, your game can go side by side with cultural visits, top-of-the-line health and fitness care, or exploration of the Kingdom’s endlessly varied landscapes. And Morocco’s network of international airports ensures that your favourite course is just a few hours’ flight away!

Quality courses and VIP treatment – whether you’re coming for a few rounds with friends, a lesson or two in the art, or with a competition ahead of you, we invite you to experience golf as you’ve never played it before, in a country where hospitality and quality of service are legendary.

Mediterranean Golf Clubs

A Nature reserve in the Saïdia region

In the north of Morocco, where the Mediterranean Sea meets the Atlantic Ocean, three superb courses are at your disposal, all of them popular with European players, who flock to the area to test their skills summer and winter alike.

The Mediterranean experience is an opportunity to acquaint yourself with Tangier, "Pearl of the Straits", a cosmopolitan city whose white kasbah, great souk, palatine gardens and brilliant blue seascape will cast their spell over you the moment you arrive.

It also gives you the chance to pay a visit to Tetouan, a town where centuries of Arabic and Andalusian influence are borne witness to by a medina listed as a UNESCO World Heritage site.

As for Saïdia, its proximity to the natural wonders of the Zegzel Valley, to the medina of Oujda, capital of the Oriental region, and to the historic oasis of Figuig, is an advantage that makes the resort more than worth a visit.

A dream Golf course

The Palmeral Golf Club Saïdia

Three clubs are planned for the resort, and this is the first to be completed. The 18-hole course was created by Spanish architect Francisco Segales - an American - style design with a few traditionally English touches thrown in for good measure, and in perfect harmony with its lush green setting. All the necessary infrastructures are provided for, to ensure that players of whatever level can enjoy their game to the full. When completed, the complex will have another 36-hole course and looks to become a model for golfing facilities throughout the Mediterranean region.

Overlooking the sea

Cabo Negro Royal Golf Club

Originally designed by Hawtree & Sons in 1976 and later remodelled by Cabell B. Robinson, to whom we owe its present appearance, the Cabo Negro Royal Golf Club lies on the slopes of the Rif massif, overlooking the sea. The course is scattered with sturdy shrubs, dunes, flowers, water hazards and hills, taking on a wilder and more natural allure in places, where mimosas and agaves lay claim to their territory. It is open all year round.

A symbol of tradition

Tangier Royal Golf Club

This was the first club to open in Morocco, and retains the natural, authentic allure endowed upon it in 1914 by its designers, Cotton and Pennink. It has since been renovated and modernised, but has kept its original "British" feel. Everything here is pure delight, from the clubhouse belvedere, where you can stand and watch the action on the putting green and practice range, to the cool, quiet fairways laid out in shade of pine, fir, and eucalyptus trees. And when you get to the hole-5 green, the highest point along the course, you are rewarded by stunning views over the roofs of the white city of Tangier...

Golf Clubs in the heart of culture

*Al Quaraouiyine Mosque,
Fez*

From palaces to putting greens

Bolstered by the success of the Hassan II Trophy, golf has become an institution throughout Morocco and its age-old cities. Players who enjoy exploring cultures other than their own will find sumptuous courses awaiting them in Rabat, Fez, Meknes, Casablanca, El Jadida, and Benslimane – towns with an impressive heritage testifying to the rich history of imperial Morocco, and where modernity goes side by side with some of the greatest masterpieces of Arab and Islamic architecture.

Treat yourself to a slice of the Kingdom's culture and history, while perfecting your game at one or all of the ten clubs to be found along the way as you tour its cities.

The Hassan II Trophy

The Hassan II Trophy, a tournament like no other

Created in 1971 by His late Majesty, King Hassan II, the Trophy that bears his name rapidly became an unmissable rendezvous for professional and amateur golfers who wanted to really put their game to the test.

Such world-famous players as Billy Casper, Santiago Luna, Payne Stewart, Colin Montgomerie and Vijay Singh have all left their mark on the event, which also includes a women's tournament, the Princess Lalla Meryem Cup.

The Hassan II Trophy and the Princess Lalla Meryem Cup are part of the "European Tour" and the "Ladies European Tour" respectively.

Live the legend!

Bouznika Bay Golf Club is located halfway between Rabat and Casablanca, its superb 9-hole course surrounded by a magnificent beach. The club was designed by Von Hagge, and harmoniously combines golfing with seaside activities. The third hole, a sublime par 5 ringed by three cloverleaf bunkers, is a highpoint in the course, which should be extended to 18 holes. Another original feature: the course is lit up by night.

One of nature's jewels

Fez Royal Golf Club

At the foot of the Atlas Mountains, architect Cabell B. Robinson has made good use of nature's whims and the undulating terrain to design a wonderful course set in the midst of an olive grove. The Fez Royal Golf Course is open all year round, its fairways winding between lakes and gigantic bunkers, the largest of which covers some 1200 m². Created in 1994, this is a deceptively playful jewel of a course that few golfers can resist testing their skills on.

An imperial course

Meknes Royal Golf Club

History pervades the air around the Royal Golf Club in Sultan Moulay Ismail's imperial city of Meknes. The murmur of the mosaic-adorned fountain, the walls sheltering a clubhouse with the roofs and minarets of the medina visible in the distance, and the mingled scents of the orange, plum, palm and olive trees in its garden are just a few of its charms. The club was founded in 1969, and is open day and night throughout the year.

A paradise of relaxation

Benslimane Royal Golf Club

Age-old cork oaks, firs, eucalyptus and fresh clean air – the Benslimane Royal Golf Club is an oasis of well-being. David Cohen designed its first 9 holes, including five under the sign of water, while Robert Van Hagge took care of the remaining 18. The par-3 hole 8 requires strength and dexterity, to get to a green located on an islet overrun with papyrus grass. The club's emblem is a snail – and if your ball gets lost in the forest undergrowth at the last hole, you'll know the reason why!

Swinging to the sound of the waves

Mohammedia Royal Golf Club

Most of the Mohammedia Royal Golf Club's course lies alongside the seafront. Long, accurate strokes are required for the first nine holes, which are buffeted by strong side winds and scattered with challenging roughs. Designed in 1930 and later remodelled by Hugues Lambert, the course pays tribute to the golfing spirit 365 days a year.

El Jadida Royal Golf Club

Every hole you play here is a fresh invitation to live free as the wind and far from the madding crowd. The player feels in harmony with nature from the first swing to the last, a sensation further heightened by the work of architect Cabell B. Robinson, who takes us from one surprise to the next, to the crowning magic of the last three holes alongside the ocean. The club was founded in 1993, and its splendid diversity of plant life, towering monkey-puzzle trees, serene lakes and ocean shoreline are at your disposal all year round.

The Atlas Golf Clubs

The Menara, Marrakech

The Red City

Marrakech is the golf city par excellence. Created in 1923 and headquarters of the David Leadbetter Golf Academy, one of the world's finest golfing schools, the Marrakech Royal Golf Club is the second oldest in Morocco. Its greens have been trodden by such eminent figures as Winston Churchill and Dwight Eisenhower... Marrakech has expanded its golfing activities considerably since the early days, and the city is now surrounded by four clubs, their courses lying at the feet of the snow-capped High Atlas Mountains. Here you can enjoy a round of your favourite game, breathing in the cool afternoon air after a hot day in the sun – and there will still be time afterwards to take in a more cultural round of the city's monuments. From Jemaa-el-Fna, Marrakech's festive nerve centre and listed as a UNESCO World Oral Heritage site, let your footsteps lead you to one of the city's many gardens (the Menara perhaps, or the Majorelle), and then onwards to explore the labyrinthine bustle of the medina's alleyways.

The Marrakech Royal Golf Club was one of King Hassan II's favourite courses, and has also attracted such illustrious players as Winston Churchill, Lloyd George, and Dwight Eisenhower. Created in the 1920s by Arnaud Massy and later modernised, it was designed with the joys of playing at the feet of the snow-capped Atlas in mind. Surrounded by cypress, palms, eucalyptus, and olive, orange and apricot trees, the pleasures of the game combine with those of the senses to make the course an unforgettable experience.

Under the spell of the oases

The Amelkis Golf Club

Set at the feet of the Atlas Mountains, the Amelkis Golf Club was inaugurated in October 1995, its course faithfully reproducing Cabell B. Robinson's design, and incorporating the natural undulations and ochre-hued hillocks that characterise the terrain. This is a highly popular venue, due to its spectacular setting, the magnificent climate that it enjoys all year round, and its elegant, high-performance amenities.

A real Desert Golf Club

Samanah Golf Club

The Samanah Golf Club is Marrakech's most recently created course, and a remarkable piece of design it is – a selective course, uncluttered with pointless traps. There is no lack of natural obstacles to contend with, including river, waterfall, lake, and a tangled forest of olive trees and cacti, so you'll need all the strategic skills you can muster! With the majestic Atlas Mountains in the background, the club offers no less than five different courses, each one of them a challenge and a pleasure to play.

A seaside rendezvous

Mogador Golf Club

There's no doubting the success of Essaouira's brand new Mogador Golf Club! Dunes make a perfect substitute for bunkers, and nature has done wonders in maximising the beauty of the setting and the intensity of play. The course, designed by Gary Player, is a brilliantly carried off combination of holes along the seafront, Scottish style, and holes tucked away in the sand, Arizona style. All in all, Essaouira's first club is an irresistible invitation to travel.

Golf Clubs in the sun

Water sports in Agadir

Agadir is becoming one of Morocco's top golfing cities, offering players a whole range of attractions alongside the pleasures of the game itself – encounters with other cultures in its magnificent hinterland, wellness and fitness care in its thalassotherapy centres, and, of course, all the mouth-watering delights of Moroccan haute cuisine. Set between mountain and sea, with 360 days of sunshine a year, a mild climate whatever the season, and a bay boasting 10 kilometres of white sandy beaches, Agadir is an altogether unique golfing destination. Its four existing clubs, their fairways giddy with the mingled scents of eucalyptus, broom and mimosa, are soon to be joined by two new additions - the Taghazout Golf Club and Golf Beach.

Agadir Bay

The legend of the South

Agadir Royal Golf Club

In 1951, a certain Scottish golf enthusiast going by the name of Mr Wilson dug a single hole in what was, at the time, nothing much more than a piece of wasteland. Following his lead, the equally enthusiastic but rather more assiduous Colonel Kamili dug the remaining eight holes to create what is now the Agadir Royal Golf Club. Fragrant with the heady scents of fir, eucalyptus and mimosa, and lulled by gentle ocean breezes, the course is open all year round, under an eternally blue sky.

From one surprise to the next

The Dunes Golf Club

The Dunes Golf Club was inaugurated in 1991 and has three very different 9-hole courses on offer - Eucalyptus, Oued, and Tamaris - promising three times the pleasure. They are the work of Cabell B. Robinson, who selected this undulating piece of land dotted with water hazards to design a facility where golf could be played at all levels of skill. Tamaris, a course that appears simple enough when you begin your round, finishes with a magnificently challenging par 5 that climbs uphill between the trees then gradually descends to the clubhouse, and requires all the subtle skill you can muster.

Their design includes lakes and waterfalls that enhance the course's beauty along with its difficulty – an atmosphere that combines all the prestige of the game with dazzling natural surroundings where tamarind trees, mimosas, eucalyptus and bougainvilleas create plays of light and shadow along the wide fairways, which are open to lovers of the game all year round.
